

Introduction

Background

London is the capital and largest city of England and the United Kingdom. Standing on the River Thames in the south-east of England, at the head of its 50-mile (80 km) estuary leading to the North Sea, London has been a major settlement for two millennia. London is considered to be one of the world's most important global cities and has been called the world's most powerful, most desirable, most influential, most visited, most expensive, innovative, sustainable, most investment-friendly, and most-popular-for-work city.

London exerts a considerable impact upon the arts, commerce, education, entertainment, fashion, finance, health-care, media, professional services, research and development, tourism and transportation. It is one of the largest financial centres and has either the fifth or the sixth largest metropolitan area GDP. It is the most-visited city as measured by international arrivals and has the busiest city airport system as measured by passenger traffic. London's universities form the largest concentration of higher education institutes in Europe.

With all these importance, the most important thing is safety of visitors and residents. To ensure the safety, crime in the city should be minimize and for this proper research and planning should be done.

Problem

As London is one of the most important city in the world so the security of the city is most important. There are always some parts of the city which have more crime rates than any other part. So the local police need to focus and control the crimes in those areas which become the major centers for criminal activities. And another problem is with people who migrate from different parts of the world for work and business. They are pretty much conscious about their safety. So they will be able to select the places in the city which have less crime rate for their residence.
